A Celebration of Joy and Team Spirit: Books For All Annual Sports Day

This February, over 800 children turned the Library cum Creativity Centre into a sports arena, celebrating Books For All's Annual Sports Day with boundless energy! From the Octopus Challenge to the Notebook Balance Game, laughter and cheer filled the air. More than medals, the real prize was the pure joy and confidence every child took home. With teachers, staff, and volunteers cheering them on, it was a day where everyone was a winner!

Books For All Shines at Adobe's Corporate Sports Day!

In an unforgettable February event, Books For All students stepped into Adobe's world-class office, competing against students from 17 NGOs—and clinching second place in every game! Beyond the games, students interacted with Adobe executives, gaining firsthand exposure to the corporate world. From the warm welcome to the flawless event execution, Adobe made this experience truly inspiring!

Testimonial: A Big Step for Our Visually Impaired Students

"These tactile books are a great gift for our students. For the first time, they can feel and understand pictures, shapes, and stories through touch. This will make learning much easier and more fun for them. We are very happy to receive these books, as they will help our children learn better and become more confident."

Breaking Barriers: Ankit's Journey from Struggles to Success

Ankit Pandey grew up in a large family where his father, a daily wage earner, struggled to make ends meet. During a career mela by Books For All, he showed interest in computers and was enrolled in a Data Entry Operator course.

After completing the course, he got a job at a courier service company earning ₹16,000. With his income, he pursued a BCA degree and later joined 360 Realtors LLP with a salary of ₹24,000. Today, he also supports his younger siblings' education.

"I am very thankful to BFA for their support. Now, I can help my family and my siblings with their studies."
